Addiewell & Loganlea (page 79)

Background In 2003 [redacted] acquired a 6.22 acre site on the east side of Station Road, Addiewell. At that time the site had been vacant and derelict for some time, having been used previously as storage area for large concrete pipes. In 2003 the company had no need for the site and engaged Rydens to market it on their behalf. Despite extensive marketing there was no interest in the site, and in 2006 it was leased for 1 year by a company requiring storage for a major pipe laying contract they had in the area. When this lease expired HSAA moved back into the site and have operated from there since then. However, the company have plans to rationalise their operation in Addiewell, and this will free up their land on the east side of Station Road. However, past experience has proved that there is little, if any demand, for employment use of the site, and there is the likelihood that when HSAA vacate the site it will remain vacant and revert to its previous derelict condition. The company would therefore like to have the site included in the West Lothian Development Plan as a residential development site. Besides avoiding the site becoming derelict, there are a number of reasons why the company believe that such a re-zoning of the land would be beneficial. Benefits of residential development of the site. The first benefit is that the site has physical characteristics and a location that are well suited for a housing development. The site is a flat rectangular area accessed up a slight incline from Station Road. A very mature woodland forms the site boundary on 3 sides, and this would allow the creation of an attractive living environment, and would also ensure that views into the site would only be possible from the frontage along Station Road. Surrounding land uses are generally compatible with the residential development of the site. Low density housing is located to the south of the site; HMP Addiewell is to the north and east, and HSAA's storage area across Station Road to the west. Detailed site design would allow any potential impacts from this last use to be minimised. The development of the site for housing would complete the removal of industrial uses from the east side of Station Road, providing a brownfield site for development. The site is a particularly sustainable housing site, not just because of its brownfield nature. Especially important is the very close proximity to Addiewell railway station with its regular and frequent services to both Edinburgh and Glasgow. Whilst it is appreciated that West Lothian Council have been successful in attracting jobs to their area, the 2 major cities of the central belt will continue to create new jobs at a faster rate, and so continue to attract employees from a wide area. Proximity to the station would a major plus for those seeking a new house in this general area as it would allow a very simple, convenient and sustainable journey to work to both Edinburgh or Glasgow. Reply to the Council's initial response to the site The Council's "Consultation responses to expressions of interest sites" (August 2014) gives the views of those consulted by the Council, and also a summary of the Council's views to why the site is not a preferred housing site. The replies from consultees do not highlight any issues that would prevent development. The Coal Authority advise caution in light of the possibility of former coal workings in the area, but this must be similar to the advice received with regard to many sites in this area. SEPA suggest a flood risk assessment given the proximity of the adjacent watercourse. This is standard advice from that body, but HSAA who have owned the site for 12 years have no record of any part of the site ever having been flooded. The possibility of land contamination and the need to investigate this issue must be a common requirement for most brownfield sites in West Lothian, and is simply a consequence of favouring the development of such land. On a more positive note, both drainage and water supplies are available with a capacity to serve the site. Access from Station Road is also seen as presenting no significant difficulty. Despite the above, the Council have concluded that there is a need to maintain an adequate supply of employment land, and this site is seen as contributing to that supply. However, it is noted in Policy EMP 1 "Safeguarding and Developing Existing Employment Land" that a de-zoning is possible where it can be shown that there is no realistic demand for the land. As noted in the first paragraph of this statement, Ryden were engaged, and marketed the property for more than 3 years, and the only offer during that time was from a company requiring storage in connection with a local pipe laying contract. This is illustrative of the lack of interest in the site from any possible employment users. Should the employment land zoning stay in place it is highly likely that the site will remain vacant once HSAA complete their rationalisation process. This would be counter productive in achieving the aims of the Council's Regeneration Strategy. In deciding not to favour the site, the Council also note that it is remote from facilities which would serve residential development. Addiewell is not a big settlement, and a limited range of local facilities are available within the settlement. It is worth pointing out that any minor disadvantage of this relative remoteness is more than compensated for in the proximity of the railway station. Finally, it is noted that another proposed housing site in this same area (Council ref: LATE-0008) is favoured, and in their comments the Council note that: "The site contributes towards the council's emerging Regeneration Strategy....This is particularly applicable to communities in the west of West Lothian by providing a different housing mix through allocating sites for private sector investment and assist in achieving more balanced communities". The development of the land at Station Road, Addiewell would have a similar beneficial impact, but without a housing development, the site may, in the longer term, have a negative environmental effect. The owners hope to complete their relocation in early course and this would allow release of the land for residential development.
